

An Indulgent Foodie's Challenge: Eating Well On $50

my list after the shock from a $3.99 sticker on a small bag of frozen blueberries hit. I took comfort in the breakfast items already in my cart — whole-wheat toast with peanut butter and banana, and ingredients for a cheesy spinach and zucchini baked-egg dish that I planned to make over the weekend. Why fret over the berries? My goal was to eat well for one week on less than $50.

I don't own the latest gadget, shop for trendy runway pieces, or even buy the hottest ski gear, but I like to cook and I love to eat out. I splurge on food. It was time to build awareness and get creative. Time to experiment with a grocery budget.

According to Internal Revenue Service figures, the average monthly national expenditure for groceries is $293 for one person ($66 per week). The food-stamp budget for a family of four is less than $70 a week, and to bring the national picture into focus, consider this: Project MANA, Tahoe/Truckee's hunger-relief agency, serves 450 individuals every week.

"Most Project MANA clients have around $80 a week to spend on a family of four," said Kaili Sanchez, Project MANA's Truckee program manager, noting that time to plan and prepare fulfilling meals is often the challenge surrounding a budget-regulated diet. "Many parents have to work long hours, have more than one child, no or limited transportation, and limited cooking space."

Eating on a budget can be stressful. I found anxiety crept in on day two — would I run out of food? Why didn't I

Eating well defined

Eating well is about more than tasty meals, so I consulted Jill Whisler, a registered dietitian with the Tahoe Center for Health and Sports Performance, who advised me to "think in threes." Each meal should contain at least three of the six food groups (fruits, vegetables, protein, dairy, fat, and carbohydrates). As Sanchez puts it, "When you plate your food, think of a peace symbol. Two large portions should be your veggies/fruit and then whole grains. The smaller portion can be your protein or dairy with a little bit of healthy fats."

Taking time to think about what I was going to prepare was critical. Lentil soup with carrots, onions, and whole-wheat toast croutons — protein, vegetable, carb. Multigrain penne with sautéed spinach and zucchini topped with mozzarella cheese — carb, vegetables, protein, and fat. You get the idea.

Shop the sales

Nancy Klenow, the store manager for Safeway in Kings Beach, emphasized the importance of planning ahead, buying items on sale, and using coupons to maximize savings. She also told me that the new "Just for U" program provides tiempo para preparar la cena

La pasta, las lentejas, y una bolsa de frijoles de Great Northern de una libra proporcionaban comidas y cenas nutritivas durante toda la semana. Preparé una sopa de frijoles: salté cebollas y zanahorias en aceite de oliva y manteca antes de agregarle verdura. Un tazón fue genial para la cena. Con espinaca fresca, la sopa satisfizo el almuerzo del día siguiente, y al final de la semana, le agregué a un tercer tazón penne y salsa de tomate que había sobrado. En breve, siguiendo el consejo de Sanchez, hice una variedad de comidas que me dejaron satisfecha a solo 78 centavos la porción.

Comidas reveladas y confesiones

No hay duda de que es posible comer bien a un precio reducido en Tahoe/Truckee. Mis comidas incluyeron queso, espinaca, setas, y un plato de huevos con zapallitos, sándwiches con muzzarella y queso cheddar, y puré de batatas con miel y un acompañamiento de brócoli al vapor, sopa de lentejas casera, y penne multigrano con una sustanciosa salsa de setas y tomate.

Nunca sentí hambre y no tuve que preocuparme por el tamaño de mi porción. De hecho, hasta me sobró comida que incluyó cuatro huevos, un trozo de muzzarella, una caja de pasta, y tazones de sopa. Sin embargo, debo confesar que un amigo me llamó para invitarme a cenar y no lo dudé. Después de todo, creo que parte de comer bien consiste en disfrutar de las comidas con otros y yo tenía suficiente comida como para devolver una invitación a comer.

Después de esta experiencia, pienso seguir utilizando las recomendaciones de Sanchez, que ella resumió como “compra en cantidad, en temporada, cocina cantidades más grandes, congela y/o planifica otras comidas teniendo en cuenta los alimentos cocinados.” No obstante, aún me encontraré gastando un poco más por el Parmesano real y disfrutando de una comida afuera de vez en cuando.

long-lasting coupons. I signed up online, linked coupons to my card, and got a dozen eggs for free.

Before I added groceries to my cart, I weighed items, double checked costs, and tried to keep a running total. When I checked out after an hour at the grocery store, I was relieved to see my total drop to $31.05 from $45.17. I immediately brought the groceries to the car, turned around, and bought a box of store-brand black pekoe tea bags and honey to satisfy my decade old morning routine. I also picked up olive oil and butter. Revised total — $47.61.

Buying items on sale and using online coupons wound up saving me more than $15. Still, there was no way I was buying a latte, at nearly four dollars, on my way out.

Buy in season

“The best way to stretch your dollars is to buy seasonally,” Sanchez said. “When produce is in season, it tastes so much better, is usually on sale because of its abundance, and is nutritionally great for that time of year.” Citrus and leafy greens, high in vitamin C, are great choices for wintertime. I snacked on a large orange, loved adding fresh spinach to soups and pasta dishes, and regretted not buying a box of clementines on sale for $4.99.

Meal makeovers

Sanchez suggested cooking a large batch of veggies or soup and using or freezing it to enjoy other convenient meals when there's not much time to prepare dinner.

Pasta, lentils, and a one-pound bag of Great Northern beans provided nutritious lunches and dinners for the entire week. I prepared a bean soup by sautéing onions and carrots in olive oil and butter before adding veggie stock. One bowl was great for dinner. Topped with fresh spinach, the soup was satisfying for lunch the next day, and at the end of the week, a third bowl was spruced up with leftover tomato sauce and penne. All in all, a variety of fulfilling meals came to just 78 cents a serving by using Sanchez's advice.

Meals revealed

It is definitely possible to eat well on a budget in Tahoe/Truckee. My meals included a cheese, spinach, mushroom, and zucchini egg dish, grilled cheddar and muzzarella sandwiches, a mashed yam with honey and a side of steamed broccoli, homemade lentil soup, and multigrain penne with a hearty tomato mushroom sauce.

I was never hungry and didn't have to watch my portion size. In fact, I even had leftovers including four eggs, a hunk of mozzarella, a box of pasta, and bowls of soup. Though I must confess, a friend called with a dinner invitation and I didn't hesitate. After all, I believe part of eating well is enjoying meals with others and I had enough food to reciprocate with a lunch invitation.

After this experience, I plan to continue to use Sanchez's recommendations, which she summarized as “buy in bulk, in season, cook in larger batches, freeze and/or plan other meals around your cooked foods.” However, you'll still catch me spending a little extra for real Parmesan and enjoying a meal out from time to time.
